Boasting glamorous accommodations, state-of-the-art facilities and second-to-none service, St. Kitts is an island to visit in luxurious style

Easy to reach with enticing premium services and a brand-new five-star beach resort, the Caribbean island of St. Kitts is an inviting and authentic getaway.

A dream arrival

The flight times couldn't be better. Twice a week, a British Airways Boeing 777 jets out of London Gatwick at 1005, bound for the instant warmth and sunshine of St. Kitts, a small and scenic island with long-standing links with Britain.

The aircraft touches down at Robert L Bradshaw International Airport at 16.35, which means there is usually enough time – thanks to the exceptionally slick meet-and-greet service available through YU Lounge – to grab a sundowner and maybe a swim at your hotel before enjoying a romantic dinner under the stars.

A resort for our times

Opened last November beside the gently shelving sands of Banana Bay, Park Hyatt, St. Kitts is a game-changing five-star resort that marks the debut of this famed luxury hospitality brand in the Caribbean.

Shaded seclusion: take a break from the heat in a beachfront conservatory at Park Hyatt

All 78 rooms and suites come with a private balcony or terrace, and treats include a choice of three restaurants, separate pools for adults and families, and the region's first Miraval Life inBalance Spa, with nine treatment rooms – three of which are couples' suites with heated plunge pools and outdoor showers.

Park Hyatt, St. Kitts has a refreshingly contemporary style that mixes clean lines and neutral tones with splashes of Caribbean colour. Welcome touches in your room include a Nespresso machine, freestanding bath tub and toiletries from New York perfumer Le Labo.

With its spectacular view across to St. Kitts' sister isle of Nevis, and the lively bars and restaurants of Cockleshell Bay Beach next door, the Park Hyatt is a perfect place for a classic Caribbean beach holiday rich with memorable moments, from sampling premium-aged rums to basking in the private rooftop infinity pools that grace the exquisite Nevis Peak suites.
